An open letter of intent,

I have always been 'crazy' enough to believe I could change the world.

I am writing to share the news that I have taken on a new role. I recently submitted a thesis for review and have been offered funding for a pilot program to be facilitated by my organisation The Centre for P.E.A.C.E. Co-Op Ltd.

Over the past two decades I have watched some of my friends work themselves into burnout and depression. I have also watched them succeed in growing families, businesses and relationships that bring love and comfort in all sorts of ways. For a long time, Melissa and I have been observing others and evaluating our direction in life; prioritising our goals to give our children the best chance of success. One of our priorities is to develop authentic and trusting friendships with people who we can depend on for support so we can leave a brilliant legacy for future generations and help others do the same.

Many years ago, one of my university professors personally challenged me to establish a model that would create peace on Earth. Some of my studies at the time were focussed on epistemology, sustainability, psychology, humanitarianism, linguistics, pragmatics, intentional chaos hypothesis, communications, the theory of everything, peace and conflict studies, metaphysics, mysticism and education theory - I have spent the past 10 years in deep research using my life as a case study.

I have been affiliating with government departments and world authorities across many fields, with the purpose of devising an applicable system to pioneer large scale positive change. Some of my work is currently undergoing peer review: biomimicry, anti-measurement, negentropic being, single point reality, looping theory, trigger-point psychology, the truth about Truth, systemic cloaking and others. You won't find any of this information on the internet.

About 12 months ago my work was refined to create a model for world peace. The nature of my system will be confronting as it will uncover corruption and challenge the ideologies that people have devoted their entire lives to.

My research has not been easy; at times it has caused me to be distracted and preoccupied and certainly set me up to look a bit strange now and then. But, it was an easy trade-off for what I believe I have achieved! Some of my research has required me to cause a bit of chaos here and there in order to probe for results – this has pushed boundaries and tested the trust and faith of many affiliates, partnerships, friendships and family – My intensity at times may have caused some people to be confused, become distant, make assumptions and possibly be insulted, it has certainly tarnished my credibility on Facebook (Lol). Although, I am certain that my research has significantly strengthened many of my relationships. I would have completed my research many years ago but building a family continues to take most of my energy.

I get that this may be somewhat confusing for people, my work seems complex at first... I hope you will all ask questions and try to understand me further. If there comes a time that you need to distance yourself from me, then you simply need to head to my chaotic Facebook page and you'll see I have given everyone everything they need to justify distancing themselves from me.

The program I will be facilitating is multifaceted: Initially, I'll be facilitating a specialised program that qualifies people to become a 'Personal Learning Specialist' and the options to operate a franchise based on maximising fun in daily life – We will offer a money back satisfaction guarantee in all aspects of what we do. Members will be provided exclusive access to a weekly program of fun activities and access to our research. Ultimately, I aim to teach people a unique approach to creating world peace while living their dreams.

My organisation has received interest from international organisations and we expect this interest to grow. With these connections comes responsibilities and I intend on challenging the integrity and ethics of many systems. While I do not own a crystal ball, it is probable that if momentum builds I may draw unwanted attention for a while. The last time I challenged a government I was unnecessarily arrested and placed in a mental institution; my family was significantly traumatised. I have now re-assessed and strengthened my approach and intend on making ripples rather than splashes. In the long term I risk negative exposure in the media, further destruction of my reputation and the possibility of more serious outcomes (such as having no Facebook friends 😊).

If anything happens to me again, please consider it suspicious – and remember ALL government departments lie (and they're good at it), the media is the biggest liar and cannot be trusted. My primary research is encrypted and kept in a safe place so if anything happens to me I'll ensure my closest family and friends get a copy of the enigma that caused me so much pain for so long; and people will eventually have more understanding as to why I took these precautions.

If you have ever seriously dreamed of changing the world then you may want to come and ask me for more details. Introductions are free, and you can always just call me an idiot (or worse) and there will be no hard feelings.

For more information about what I'm up to, other than raising a family, check out this website: www.thecentreforpeace.com.au – I haven't perfected everything yet – so if you feel you have skills that may help or you can see discrepancies in my work please let me know. We thrive off constructive criticism.

Not many of my friends like to talk about the work that I do, I often get told that I overthink or that I think too deep. I totally understand this. However, I pray that eventually you'll all see my life-work as testament to the good person I am and aspire to be. Wouldn't it be something if (when) I am successful...

God speed – James
